

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Device for taking a sample of biological tissue transcutaneously, comprising: a needle arrangement having a tubular-shaped body, having an end associable with a grip and being provided with an edge free at the opposite end, lamina elements movable between a neutral position wherein they lies near said tubular-shaped body and an operating position wherein they are distanced from the latter, wherein said lamina elements protrude towards said end.